

Congress: To allow the NAB to influence the federal government in limiting what XM satellite radio can broadcast is absolutely ridiculous! AM/FM radio a technology which has been available for over a century has done little in the last 100 years to improve on itself or add any new technologies to add to its service, instead for years we have had to listen to whatever the advertisers believe we should listen to. Now I can choose with my pocket book, and 9.99 is an exceptional value to now have over 100 channels to choose on now, not to mention news etc...Like all businesses they come and go, it is not XM's fault that radio hasn't progressed, they are only guilty of coming up with a new technology, which adds much more value and control over what we choose to listen to. In this day and age of terrorism, rising gas prices, peace, education, and healthcare. The federal government has a lot of other things they should be worried about, instead of limiting what XM can bring to its customers who above all are paying for the service, rather than being subjected to it as the radio stations are allowed. I hope this HELPS!!! I love you XM, whether in the car or on the beach, you are one of the coolest inventions since the Internet!!!

Thanks,
Christian Wulfers
Daphne, Alabama